

ECONOMY

- The global economy is slowing and central banks are lowering growth forecasts across the board.
- While the U.S. Real GDP growth clocked in at 2.9% for 2018, most forecasters believe GDP will be weaker in 2019 due to global growth concerns. These headwinds include: on-going trade tensions with China; Brexit; and the strengthening U.S. dollar.
- The longest government shutdown in history that ended on January 25th, is also expected to hurt growth in the first quarter of 2019.
- Citing global economic conditions and stable, low inflation, the Federal Reserve Chairman Powell, indicated that the Fed does not intend to raise rates again in 2019 at this time.

MARKETS

- U.S. equities posted double-digit returns in Q1, following the sell-off in the final quarter of last year. Investors have been eager for the U.S. to strike a trade deal with China and they find relief in the Fed's decision to pause rate hikes for the rest of the year.
- Most of the market gains so far this year can be attributed to the Technology, Industrials, and Consumer Discretionary Sectors. The Financial and Healthcare Sectors have lagged the overall market considerably.
- U.S. bonds have performed very well so far this year as well as global investors seek quality. The high demand for U.S. debt, along with the Fed pausing rate hikes, have pushed yields down further.

STRATEGY

We continue to focus on risk reduction, through:

- Appropriate asset allocation
- Intermediate term bond maturities
- Over-weighting of recession resistant sectors (consumer staples, health care, utilities)
- Use of stronger balance sheet, higher yielding stocks
- Cash reserves
